Planners from across the region will gather in Salt Lake City this fall for APA Utah's 2025 Fall Conference. Over two days, the conference will feature a robust lineup of sessions that address the diverse needs of both urban and rural communities. Designed for professional planners, citizen planners, and elected officials alike, the program will cover critical topics such as planning ethics, historic preservation, transportation, housing, and inclusion. Attendees can also take part in mobile tours offering real-world case studies of planning and environmental projects throughout the Salt Lake area.
